LENNOX COUNTY FAIR

A RECORD ATTENDANCE AT THE FAIR GROUNDS FOR THREE DAYS

The promise of the management of the Lennox Fair made last year that we would have a bigger and better fair than ever this year, was amply fulfilled, and the promise was faithfully kept in every way.

More races, better midway, larger and better exhibits, and exceptionally good attractions.

On Tuesday afternoon the school children of the town and county marched in a body to the fair grounds as guests of the Fair. It was indeed a pretty sight to see the children, who were carrying flags, march to the Fair. And how they did enjoy themselves during the afternoon.

The Directors were fortunate in securing the Benson Midway, which added greatly to the success of the show. This company have a real clean show, and received good patronage, especially the ferris wheel, merry-go-round, and whip. The free driving act of Miss Collier was a splendid drawing card and fully up to the claims made for it.

The baseball game on Tuesday between the Havanna Red Sox and Ponies of Kingston, was a real game and resulted in a win for the Ponies by a score of 3-1.

The cattle barn, which was enlarged last fall to double the former size, was none too large to accommodate the horses and cattle on exhibition, and more room for stock will be necesary another year.

The main building, where the merchants of Napanee exhibited their wares, is very bright and attractive. In this building were found the following merchants' displays: Haines Shoe Store, The Graham Clothing Co., the Hydro Electric shop, Wallace's Drug Store, Weiss Bros. shoes, the Gibbard Furniture Co., which is one of the leading industries of Napanee, R. B. Allen, piano merchant, the Daly Tea Co., Davy & Allison; hardware. Other exhibitors were Arthur A. Sills, hardwood flooring, Belleville, W. D. Mildmer, lumber merchant, Dominion Experimental Farm. The Napanee Women's Institute had a very attractive booth in this building, where many good things to eat were sold.

There was also a very large display of fancy work, contributed by the ladies from the surrounding districts. The ladies in charge of this booth were Mrs. L. Boyes, Mrs. Wm. Smith, Miss D. Miller, Miss E. Ashley, Mrs. Galbraith and Mrs. Frank Boyes.

The display of potted plants, cut flowers, and canned fruit was very large and attractively displayed. The building was filled to capacity, and it is the intention of the management to double the capacity of this building next year.

The poultry building was also filled to capacity and the judge made the remark that it was the best exhibition he had attended.

AUTOMOBILE EXHIBITION

In a large tent adjoining the main building the automobile dealers showed their most up-to-date cars. The following dealers exhibited: C. A. Wiseman, Chevrolet agent, who showed the "Four Ninety Special" and the "F.B." Special; Hartman & Card had the Gray-Dort and Oldsmobile; Paul & Smith showed the old reliable Ford; E. G. Guss, who had the Velie and the Dodge cars on exhibition. C. A. Anderson & Sons showed the Maxwell car. The Lennox Motor Company presented the Studebaker.

Malcolm C. Burgess, who is agent for the Tire & Rubber Company which has a plant in Belleville, was exhibiting the goods of the firm.

In a smaller tent the Brisco cars were on exhibition.

During the afternoon an exhibit of decorated cars was held and Miss Wallace, daughter of T. B. Wallace was awarded first prize.

The Napanee band was present throughout each performance, and their music was much appreciated.

THE BABY SHOW

In the evening exhibition hall presented a beautiful spectacle with its tastefully decorated booths and the long centre table running the length of the building, loaded with a delightful array of flowers and handsome plants, together with a delectable and appetising array of apples, pears, plums and other fruits, and this grand display was fully accentuated by innumerable electric lights overhead. The hall was provided with comfortable chairs, which accommodated over a thousand people, to see fair play done by the charming tots in the different classes in the baby show.

W. S. Herrington, K.C., acted as chairman in his usual happy

POLICEMAN COTTER OF KINGSTON SHOT BY AUTO BANDITS

While endeavoring to round up three auto bandits near Latimer on Friday afternoon last, Constable James Cotter was shot in the left arm by one of the bandits.

Wm. Lyons, a chauffeur, and Stewart Patterson, a taxi driver, who were with Constable Cotter, had a close call.

The bandits were travelling in a car which had been stolen the previous night from Mr. R. S. Waldron. Word was received at the police station that the car had been seen at Harrowsmith during the morning, and following the clue furnished, Constable Cotter, with Messrs. Patterson and Lyons, left the city to look for the stolen car. They came upon the bandits with the car on a side road, off the Perth road, and Constable Cotter ordered the men to surrender. "Get back out of this, or we will bore you with holes." Constable Cotter drew his revolver and fired, and it is believed grazed the cheek of one of the bandits. At the same time one of the bandits fired a shot at Cotter with a rifle, wounding him in the arm. A fusilade of bullets were fired at the car, the marks of no less than thirteen bullets being afterwards found on the car used by the police. Several people got a good view of the bandits, who are described as follows: Driver, about 25 or 30 years of age, clean shaven, medium height, dark grey suit, darker cap. No. 2—small man, about 5 ft. 7 in., 25 to 30 years of age, dark suit spotted with stains, dirty. No. 3—small man, about 5 ft. 5 in., 25 to 30 years of age, wore glasses, had a combination khaki suit with trousers turned up at the bottom.

Though the Kingston police have been scouring the city and country no trace has yet been found of the bandits.

The car was found on Saturday on the road leading to Cartwright's point.

The police believe that the same three bandits were responsible for the Beard murder at Napanee, and several other recent crimes.

GOOD HORSE RACES

The horse races were probably two of the best which have been seen in some years. In the 2.35 class there were five horses entered. "Monotell", owned by J. Hodgson, of Lindsay, carried off first money when he captured one second and three firsts.

The running race was very exciting and exceptionally good time was made. In the first heat of this race it was feared that some person would be seriously injured when one of the horses which was competing got beyond control and ran for a considerable distance before the rider was able to bring it to a halt. The animal had to be pulled out of the second heat of the race.

The races were as follows :

Half Mile Run—
"Bells," owned by J. Wilson, Toronto..... 1 1
Ella Jennings, owned by J. Wilson, Toronto..... 2 2
""Black Star," owned by P. Mullchull, Toronto..... 3 3
P. Mulligan, Toronto, acted as starter.

2.25 Trotting Class—

"K. L. Lambert, owned Dr. Benson, Belleville 3 2 4 2
"Todd McGregor," owned by W. J. Tomlin, of Cobourg 4 3 3 3

The farmers' race created a great deal of excitement. "Toddie On," owned by Elgin McWilliams, of Camden East, carried off the honors when he finished first in both heats and "Miss Spring," was second and "Hagerman" was third.

The three winners in the boys' bicycle races were Arthur Parrott, first ; Archie Wilson, second; and L. Gowling, third.

On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons the spectators were given an unusual treat by the men of the riding establishment of the R. M. C., Kingston. These men, who have been trained under the able direction of Capt. Bray, riding instructor, delighted all with their Arabic tent pegging display. All were in Arabic costume.

Company Sergant Lontham, of the R. M. C., also gave a fine exhibition of jumping on horseback on Tuesday and Wednesday.

In the High School Cadet competition Kingston Collegiate won the silver cup donated by Mr. U. M. Wilson, C.O.A., which was won by Napanee last year.

Green Runs, has three heads than any other car. It is the car for real service. Messrs. Paul & Smith had some fine cars that were admired by thousands at the Fair and no doubt the local agents will in the near future sell many. Those on exhibition were the Ford Touring Car, Ford Coupe and Ford Sedan. They looked fine enough for anyone to be proud of. Other exhibits that this firm demonstrated were the Phelps Lighting Electric Plant, and the Wesco Water Pumping System, and they will be pleased to give further demonstrations after the Fair at their garage and warerooms, Dundas street, Napanee.

THE EXHIBITS

The following special reports of some of the finest displays will prove interesting reading and should repay readers for the time expended in their perusal :—

Wallace's Drug Store, Limited

The booth occupied by this enterprising and progressive firm was a source of attraction throughout the duration of the Fair. There were good reasons for a crowd being always there. It contained something that interested or appealed to young and old, rich and poor, male and female. To begin with, baloons were here given away to the children ; then again generous packages of Cowan's Cocoa were handed out to those who wanted them. Cowan's famous Chocolate Bars could here be had. Guestroom packages of the famous Woodbury's Facial Soap were also distributed gratis, as were also samples of Face Cream, Face Powder and Miss Dainty Toilet Soap made by the same reputable firm, well and favorably known the world over. Another special feature of Wallace's display was a demonstration of "How to do your own graining," with Campbell's Surface and Campbell's Varnish Stain. The demonstration proved how simple the process is, for the demonstrator was a young school boy, actually doing the graining and doing it rapidly and well. Wallace's are agents for Campbell's Surface and Campbell's Varnish Stain. Get some and try it. Visitors to the Fair must have seen the large sign-board in the booth of The Daly Tea Company, Limited, telling them to get Daly's Good Tea and coffee at Wallace's. If you like tea and coffee of a better quality and flavor than you can get elsewhere, call at Wallace's and be supplied.

The Graham Company

The artistic and attractive display of this well known Clothing and Men's Furnishings House was much admired. The display showed principally Winter Overcoats and Suits manufactured by the 20th Century Brand Company, and their goods are too well known for the excellence of quality, fit, style and workmanship to require any comment here. Wear 20th Century clothing and you will feel well dressed and up to the minute as regards style. Many other makes of clothing may be seen and appreciated by visiting their well equipped store. See them when you require hats, shirts, collars, gloves, ties, underclothing. You will also find that they have always in stock the best brands of overalls, work shirts, and other articles in their line.

J. J. Haines Shoe Houses

This firm is an old and well established one and they do business in one of the most attractive stores in town, built and fitted up on purpose for their large and ever-increasing business. Courteous and prompt attention to customers, a large stock of well known brands of boots, shoes and rubbers is one of the reasons why so many people like to deal at Haines'. A large and varied stock of trunks, suit cases, club bags and other travelling equipment always on hand. The firm have large stores in Belleville and Trenton, and their large volume of business enables them to buy and sell at prices advantageous to their customers. Call and be convinced.

Beaver Brand Hardwood Flooring

An exhibit which attracted much unusual attention at the Lennox Fair was that of Mr. Arthur A. Sills, Belleville, showing "Beaver Brand" hardwood flooring, both in natural and finished panels. This flooring is manufactured by the Seaman Kent Co., Toronto, who are the largest manufacturers of hardwood flooring in Canada. As this flooring is made by "Flooring Specialists" you are assured of both quality and service. Mr. Sills wishes to take this opportunity of thanking the Directors and Officers of Napanee and district for their interest taken in this "Beaver Brand" flooring exhibit. Estimates on floors will be cheerfully furnished by Mr. Sills, or by writing The Seaman Kent Co., Limited, Toronto.

Ford Cars, Phelps' Lighting Plant, Wesco Water Pumping System, Paul & Smith Exhibitors.

Ford Cars are so popular, better known all over the world than any other car, that it is difficult to find something new to say of them. They have for long been listed subject to jokes, have been sneered at, abused, reviled, praised and appreciated, and notwithstanding all these trials and tribulations, has more friends than any other car. It is the car for real service. Messrs. Paul & Smith had some fine cars that were admired by thousands at the Fair and no doubt the local agents will in the near future sell many. Those on exhibition were the Ford Touring Car, Ford Coupe and Ford Sedan. They looked fine enough for anyone to be proud of. Other exhibits that this firm demonstrated were the Phelps Lighting Electric Plant, and the Wesco Water Pumping System, and they will be pleased to give further demonstrations after the Fair at their garage and warerooms, Dundas street, Napanee.

Tiger Tires.

In the Automobile marquee much interest was shown in the exhibit of Tiger Tires, which are entirely Canadian made, new modern Tire Factory at Belleville, Ont. Equipped with the most up-to-date manufacturing machinery in Canada. Tiger Tire Plant contains apparatus designed to improve the resiliency and durability of tires which no other factory in Canada contains. A tire proven by use and gruelling tests to have the splendid stamina, tough wearing quality and dependability which every car owner wants in a tire. Two reasons why Tiger Tires are the best tires in Canada :—Because made in the most modernly equipped tire factory in the Dominion. Because made of rubber bought when the bottom fell out of the raw rubber market, at a cost of about one-third that of rubber now used in many factories. This low cost of raw rubber enables the makers of Tiger Tires to use more pure rubber ; to put on heavier treads, giving more wear surface, and to build thicker sidewalls, giving greater strength.

The result as a longer wearing, more resilient tire—a tire that can take more air pressure and therefore decrease traction friction and save gasolene, while its thick walls of pure rubber give greater resiliency. When you drive on Tiger Tires you will know your car is shod with the most dependable tire that is made in Canada. Every size for every make of car. Every model for every rim. If you have partly worn tires on your car now, buy a Tiger for a spare. No matter what your experience with tires has been, you'll say you've never had tires that gave better satisfaction than Tiger Tires after you have used them. The head office of the company and salesrooms are at 81 Adelaide St., West, Toronto, and the local agent is C. A. Wiseman.

Velie and Dodge Cars

E. O. Ungar had fine exhibits of the popular Velie and Dodge Cars, and the visitors to the Fair evinced much interest in both makes of cars. The Dodge Touring Car, of which there was a fine specimen, was a special favorite with prospective buyers. The Dodge Coupe, however, attracted the most attention. An interesting point to intending purchasers of the Touring Car is the substantial cut of $600 in the price and now this popular car is selling for $1625. This should mean a very large increase in sales of this most capable, comfortable and economical car. All interested are invited to call at Mr. Ungar's garage and get demonstration before buying a car of any kind. Dodge Motor Trucks give satisfaction.

Mr. Ungar has recently purchased the building at the corner of Dundas and Robert streets and has it now transformed into an up-to-date garage. In connection with the garage is a machine shop equipped with all the latest modern machinery which, together with expert machinists, makes it possible for him to do all work entrusted to him satisfactory in every particular.

Chevrolet—C. A. Wiseman.

The exhibit of C. A. Wiseman of Chevrolet Cars was very attractive, and prospects look good for largely increased sales of these popular cars. The 490 Special Touring Car was shown for the first time, and was the centre of attraction and was greatly admired. This fine new car has all the equipment of the big car, and the price delivered to your home is only $950. This new car will make an appeal to discriminating buyers who want an economical car equipped with every device for comfort, convenience, beauty and utility. At the close of the Fair this car will be on exhibition at Mr. C. A. Wiseman's warerooms, and he will be pleased to give a practical demonstration to all interested.

McLaughlin Cars—C. A. Anderson & Son.

The McLaughlin Cars on exhibition at the Fair proved most attractive to those interested in getting the best there is in an automobile. The McLaughlin Buick Master Four, which is one of the most satisfactory cars on the market, has now proven its worth. It received the careful consideration of those who desire the finest of equipment, and a car that is thoroughly durable, has every convenience and comfort, and is economical in fuel. For wear and tear the McLaughlin has no equal, and is economical in repairs. C. A. Anderson & Son will be pleased to give a demonstration of the good points of this fine car at any time.

Veteran of Civil War Still Hale and Hearty

GEORGE D. SHAW, Springfield, Mass.

"To say that I feel twenty-five years younger, twenty-five years healthier, and twenty-five years stronger express what Tanlac has done for me better than any other way I can put it," said George D. Shaw, veteran of the Civil War, who now lives at 321 Walnut Street, Springfield, Mass.

"I am now seventy-eight years old and I don't hesitate to say I have never known a medicine to equal Tanlac. For 15 years I was subject to attacks of indigestion that were so bad at times I would have to lay up for a week or two. For a long time I lived on crackers and milk alone as nothing else agreed with me.

"When I started on Tanlac I weighed only one hundred and seventeen pounds and my days were thought to be numbered. I've been so wonderfully built up, I now weigh one hundred and forty-three pounds and my stomach is as sound as a dollar. In fact, I believe I could eat the old army rations again without it hurting me in the least.

"I never miss a chance of saying a good word for Tanlac and I would like to urge the boys of the "Sixties" who are not feeling right to give it a trial, for I am sure it would put them in line again just as it has me. For a man of my age to have no physical ailment, to be well and strong and enjoy life as he did twenty-five years ago, is certainly something to be thankful for and there is nothing too good I can say for Tanlac.

Tanlac is sold in Napanee at Wallace's Drug Store, Ltd., and by leading druggists everywhere.

INTERVIEW WITH AN EX-M.P. ON POLITICAL LEADERS OF THE DAY

Mr. R. R. Hall, K.C., Liberal ex-M.P., for West Peterborough, was interviewed on the present political situation on his return from Ottawa, and said :

"Wherever you go, you gather the impression that the Meighen Government is doomed. It is held responsible for the sins of the Borden Government and for the present stagnation in business and unemployment.

"But the opponents of the Right Honorable Arthur Meighen must not get over-confident. He is remarkably clever and is at his best when fighting in the open field. He already has won a great advantage over his opponents by their dividing into groups and fighting in groups—the more the better for him and the worse for a united and prosperous Canada."

"What about the Hon. T. A. Crerar and the Farmers Party ?" asked the reporter.

"Mr. Crerar must share with Mr. Meighen the sins of the Borden Government, said Mr. Hall, "because he was a responsible member of that government when it committed many of its most unscrupulous, tyrannical and extravagant acts. Take one illustration : Mr. Crerar was a party to promising the farmers exemption from military service in order to get their votes in 1917 and when he got their votes he went back on that promise and lectured a great farmers deputation in the Arena Rink, Ottawa, on their lack of patriotism because they protested against such treacherous conduct. Mr. Crerar is not a progressive but is a reactionary heading a class movement that will prevent the inflow of foreign capital to aid development of our great natural resources. History simply shows that great class movements breed distrust and produce hard times and unemployment. Witness the recent coal strike in Great Britain. The miners tried to exercise class conscious power and for a time paralyzed all other industries, produced hard times and unemployment and finally brought misery and even ruin on themselves. Had miners legislative power this class movement would have been

A Friend of the Family

Over fifty years ago a young physician practiced widely in Pennsylvania and became famous for his uniform success in the curing of disease. This was Dr. R. V. Pierce, who afterwards established himself in Buffalo, N. Y., and placed one of his prescriptions, which he called "Golden Medical Discovery," in the drug stores in the United States and Canada, so that the public could easily obtain this remarkable tonic, corrective, and blood-maker. Dr. Pierce manufactured this "Discovery" from roots and barks without alcohol—a correcti remedy, the ingredients of which nature had put in the fields and forests, for keeping us healthy. Introduces pure red blood into the system, and health is assured. When you feel run-down, out of sorts, blue and despondent try the energising influence of this reliable tonic. British Will Dominate Life in Constantinople As Result of Great War

CONSTANTINOPLE, we are told by an American Government official, who writes in the New York Times, is becoming British, and we infer that once it becomes a British city it will remain so. Before the war the city was rather French, and that language was spoken generally by even the uneducated classes. France controlled 60 per cent. of Turkey's public debt, and 53 per cent. of the foreign capital invested in private enterprises, and also had control of the Ottoman Imperial bank, which had a monopoly of the note-issuing privilege. Comparative figures as to the extent to which British capital has replaced the French are not available, but it is plain to the man in the street that Britain is the real power in Constantinople to-day. The small shopkeepers, we are told, have seen which way the wind is blowing and are learning the English language. The same accomplishment should prove useful to all classes, for the police are British and give their orders in the English language.

Theoretically, control of Constantinople is inter-allied, but the French have neither the men nor the money to compete with Britain. The Turkish Government is in sad need of funds, because, owing to the situation in Asia Minor, and the occupation by the Allies of other large portions of Turkish territory, the national treasury is almost solely dependent upon the customs receipts of Constantinople. Last September the Government officially announced that it was unable to pay its troops or functionaries, and the official says, "The English have taken hold of the job with their usual thoroughness and have settled down to be comfortable, just as they did when the war stabilized on the Western front. The best houses in Constantinople have been commandeered for officers' headquarters. Five o'clock tea is all the rage on the Grand Rue, and tea and whisky and soda are replacing Turkish coffee and douzico. British military police with shining brass buttons and conspicuous arm bands direct traffic at the busy corners, and if a Russian jazz place remains open after midnight it is a British policeman who closes it up and levies the penalty."

The day of the Turk is over, he says. Most of final blame for it every hand. Most of the costly royal palaces and great private houses are empty and dilapidated, and the beautiful gardens and grounds are no more. Turkish life and manners have undergone a metamorphosis, partly as a result of the war, though the change was apparent before. The harem has vanished. Rarely does a Turk sport more than one wife, even in some remoter parts of Asia Minor, though there is no law to prevent it. The Turkish woman is emerging. The poverty created by the war made it necessary for hundreds of Turkish women to seek their own living, and they are now to be found working in banks and stores, and half of them appear in public with their veils thrown back, though the women cling to the old religious customs, which impose many restrictions on women in public.

In their own homes Turkish women receive Christian men and talk and dine with them. On the street, however, they would not be seen with any man but a Moslem. The Turkish women who are receiving are usually highly cultivated, and form charming companions for the British and other allied officers and officials. Their own men folk appear not to value them for their intellectual gifts, and look to members of their harems to give them the kind of companionship. They continue to treat their women like toys. The Turk at heart is one of the most conservative of human creatures, and whatever degree of latitude he may allow his women, or whatever new freedom they may seize, it will be a long time before the Turk regards his wife as is the custom in more civilized countries. Whether the women are satisfied with the existence ship is not known, but they are probably compensated by the great improvement in their lot in the past decade.

Business in Turkey goes on in the old way. Nobody believes what anybody says about anything when it is a matter of sale. On the contrary, he assumes that the other party to the transaction is just as great a liar as he is himself and almost invariably he is right. No business can be speedily transacted. Every sale is a matter of long haggling, even though the object is as trifling as a box of sardines. One change noticeable in the streets is the appearance of the motor car. Before the war delivery of articles or vehicles was practically and all the cartage was done on the backs of a class of men known as hamals. These men formed a powerful union and their influence is attributed to Constantinople's backwardness. Their strength must be prodigious, for two of them will carry a piano any distance and think little of it. Business is further hampered by the fact that the peace treaty has not yet been ratified. Britain seems content to let matters take their course, for experience has taught her that such a course in the end is likely to be favorable to her.

In Happy Quandary.

"What are your hopes for the future?" asked the solemn man.

"I have none just now," replied the youth. "To-morrow is my girl's birthday, and I am worrying about the present."

FERGUS HAS A HUMORIST.

National Game Taken as His Subject for Jesting.

In the town of Fergus there is a man with a sense of humor. The citizens of Elora would tell you that a man who lives in Fergus has to have a sense of humor in order to survive. That is the kindly way that these two neighbors, living within a three-mile limit of each other, speak of passing compliments. The Fergusites would probably retort by recalling the decayed athletic glories of Elora — how the Rocks once brought them fame on the lacrosse field, but how that greatness is now a thing of the past.

The Fergus humorist does his little stunt in the town paper, and recently he has been devoting some attention to the national game. He is inclined to think that by playing lacrosse in front of foreigners, Canada has won its "reputation of being a sturdy, fearless nation."

Like every humorist in the province, who does not live in Toronto, he takes a rude jibe at that city in telling how lacrosse is played in Ontario. He says: "There are several series of lacrosse. The senior series are professional. Considering the work of showing Toronto people that their big city isn't the only place in the province. In this regard, Weston and Orangeville are doing a good work. The intermediate series is largely a difference in name. The junior series includes all those who look as though they might be championships until he grows a long black beard and has a son ready to take his place with the juveniles.

"The Fergus Maple Twain has evidently mixed with lacrosse players, and has come to the conclusion that the goalkeeper is the most important member of the team. Here are the reasons: "He is the only man that a beaten team will say was a good player on the winning side, and it was invariably due to his wonderful play that they lost. Or it may be that the other goalkeeper had better luck than their own. But if the goalkeeper gets all the credit, he deserves some of it at least. His job is about as good as standing up and letting a runner see how close he can come without hitting you."

Regarding the official who looks after the game, the writer says: "Unlike the players, the referee stays on the field all the time. On account of being among them, he does not see half as much as the rival spectators, or at least that is the popular impression. If one side is doing too well, it is his duty to put off some of the players until they even up. He sometimes puts them off for other reasons. That is the main difference between lacrosse at present and in prehistoric days. Then every man refereed for himself."

There was a period in between the present and the prehistoric past, when the crowd decided how the game should be refereed. Surely the Fergus humorist has not forgotten that. In those days, the referee did not "stay on the field all the time." If the home team was beaten, he blew the final whistle, dropped everything, including his dignity, and made for the fence. He took a shortcut to the railroad track. If he was fast enough to overtake the train, so much the better for him. If not —well, as Shakespeare would say: "The rest is silence."

Those were what the old-timers call "The palmy days of lacrosse."

To the crowds, the writer also gives a word of advice: "When a player is hacked purposely, it is the duty of every able-bodied man among the onlookers to rush on the field and form a circle close around him. This keeps the referee unconscious a little while longer, and gives the other players more time to rest. Then, when he comes to, it proves very reassuring for him to look up into the faces of his friends, for it indicates that he is still alive. If he had gone to heaven he wouldn't have been greeted by all those familiar maps gazing down on him."

When Cat Meets Dog.

Most of the instinctive actions of domesticated animals may be traced back to what they did in the days when they roamed wild, and were forced to defend themselves at a moment's notice.

For example, even a Pomeranian dog will turn round and round before curling up to go to sleep—a reversion to the days when its ancestors had to trample down the grass in order to make a bed for themselves.

The instinctive arching of a cat's back when it meets a dog with which it is not on friendly terms is an indication that the cat has recognized its traditional enemy. It assumes an involuntary position of defence against the expected attack. The fact that the cat is terrified is apparent by the bristling of the fur, while arching the back brings the feet close together, and gives the claws a firmer grip on the ground, thus permitting exceptionally rapid movement in any direction.

Moreover, the cat knows instinctively that the dog will seek to sink its teeth in the back of its neck, so withdraws its head as far as possible.

A Dutch Custom.

Some of the older houses in Holland have two doors, which are only used for marriages. On the left, one door the bride and bridegroom enter, and through the other they are carried out when dead.

Always treat the boatman with civility and respect, and he will return the compliment.

Queen Mary Horrified By the Slums of London, Which Will be Improved

FOR many years the slums of London have been among the worst in the world, and a disgrace to the nation. The long campaign against them, which was interrupted by the war, appears now to be coming to a close with a victory, due largely to the strong personal interest Queen Mary has taken in the matter. The London County Council had decided that the district, or the worst parts of it, should be rebuilt, but it was curiously slothful in making a beginning. The result was that Col. W. J. Lewis, mayor of Bethnal Green, began to call public attention to the slums, and made one effective speech at the Church of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, overlooking Trafalgar Square. Among those who read a report of the address was Queen Mary. She read it not only with interest, but it is supposed with something like horror, and determined that she would exert her influence to assist the energetic mayor. So a few hours after she had come to this decision she summoned Col. Lewis to Buckingham Palace.

He went with maps and plans of his district and more fully expounded the question, emphasizing the horrible conditions under which so many Londoners lived and the vital necessity of making an immediate start to improve them, Col. Lewis, as was his wont, did not mince words, and he succeeded in thoroughly shocking the Queen. According to a story in the Louisville Courier Journal, "Describing one set of house properties, he said they were what are known as back-to-back houses. This he illustrated by two boxes and explained that only one side was open to the outer air and that was the front of each cottage. As the whole of the sanitary arrangements were located close to the front door, the Queen, Col. Lewis said, could imagine what the conditions of life must be.

"'Horrible,' was the Queen's comment."

The mayor said that many properties in the district were never reached by the sun at any time of the day throughout the year. Families of seven or eight, many of them soldiers' families, were forced to live in two rooms. Moreover, the rentals were enormous, considering the size and convenience of the properties. Profiteers had actually rented their premises out by single rooms or in tiny suites, obtained three or four times the return they could have received if they let the house as a unit. Now the Queen had thought she had a fair acquaintance with the poorer districts of London, frequently visiting that and other such, judging from a remark she made to Col. Lewis, these visits were carefully arranged so that she might escape the real horrors of life in these conditions. She said, "It is pretty clear to me that when I have visited the poor districts I have been taken mainly to the highways and not to the byways."

She determined that she would see the slums for herself, and Green, and made arrangements with Col. Lewis to that effect. Nobody in the town, except the mayor, the sanitary inspector, and Harry Lloyd Verney, her private secretary. For an hour and a half the little party, guided by the mayor, walked through the worst slums in London and royalty saw for the first time the conditions that prevailed. After examining the outside of the houses, the Queen entered house after house, selecting them herself, and spoke to the inmates. She even stopped and talked to people on the street, making inquiries about wages, work, families. In the course of her tour, she said, "I have come to see for myself as a mother to her family." Before the inspection had been completed, all Bethnal Green knew that the Queen was paying a visit, and toward the end she had a large gallery. When she drove away she was given such a send-off as had not been seen in Bethnal Green for a long time.

One of her first acts after returning to Buckingham Palace was to summon Dr. Addison, President of the Local Government Board. With him she had a long talk, and it is said spoke her mind, not only with freedom, but with emphasis, showing no willingness whatever to be put off with formal assurances that the matter would be investigated. Since then there has been outlined a vast housing scheme for England and Wales, which represents part of the Government's policy of reconstruction and social reform. Already the plans contemplate the erection of some 90,000 new houses. The London County Council, as a result of the Queen's activities, has decided to begin work in Bethnal Green, and has announced that it will immediately clear the notorious Bradly street slums.

The Reason.

"How does it happen, my boy," asked the curate, "that your name is Allen and your mother's name is Taylor?"

The boy thought for a moment.

"You see, sir," he said, "my mother married again, and I didn't."

Must Keep Quiet.

Curate (referring to a slightly intoxicated passenger) — "Conductor, do you allow drunken men on these cars?"

Conductor (in a whisper) — "It will be all right, sir, if you don't get noisy."

Facts About Lord Byng

FROM Thorpe-le-Soken two good things have come for Canada—a bishop and a governor-general; a great spiritual and a great carnal soldier. Bishop Robins of Athabasca resigned his vicarage of Thorpe-le-Soken to labor in holy orders in our semi-farthest north. Lord Byng left his excellent house near the same Essex village to learn the difference between giving orders to Canadians on the western front and signing orders prepared by gentlemen who will not say "By your leave," but "Sign here."

Bishop Robins was once a missionary in India. How he came to forsake the neighborhood of Colchester and its oysters for Athabasca and its whitefish is one of the romances of Christian dedication. The bishop is as fine a specimen of unselfishness as any generation has ever known.

Lord Byng gave up Thorpe-le-Soken for Rideau Hall, confident that he does not come to a haunted barn. He has no princely revenues like those of the Earl of Devon, whose he is a younger son, as his wife is the daughter of a younger son. He has been in the army since he was 21. It was all he could do to maintain the dignity of a captaincy in the Hussars as handsomely as earl's sons must. It ought to be sustained as it was a full general before the war, and commanded the East Anglian district. But he did not marry young, and then he united the social with a man should not marry till he is forty; and if he doesn't know better than he should be horse-whipped.

The question of the governor-General's marriage is of some consequence to Canada. The House of Commons, three short years ago, poured disdain upon hereditary titles —a contempt which the Cabinet had forestalled by the most remarkable order-in-council of modern times. But there are important elements of our population which do very much prefer that all who share in representing the King here shall have been born agreeably to Burke and Whitaker's Titled Persons. Of Lord Byng's great ancestry, a monarchical writer has produced unimpeachable evidence. He is a seventh son. That in itself is believed to be a mark of distinction; though one who humbly possesses it may remark that there seems little more in it than in a suit of clothes in its time can play many parts; that our brothers are paragons of virtue; and that you did not know your Byngs of Vimy from incoming waiters. Of another aspect of this seventh-son business a word may be said in a minute.

Lord Byng's father was the second Earl of Stratford—no relation, so far as the pedigreegian volumes declare, of the first earl, whose name was Wentworth and who lost his head because the Parliament demanded it and Charles the First was Wentworthy and so save it. Lord Byng, a name which was in the fighting class ages before Vimy was emblazoned on our banners.

Lord Byng's father was not a peer; though his father was — Earl Ducie. But as she couldn't be a seventh son, as her husband is, her father was a seventh son. Lord Ducie been knighted, as who shouldn't be after being about thirty years the Prince's and the King's marshal of ceremonies? The Ducies' estate is about fourteen thousand acres, from which it appears that so long as they ran to seven sons apiece, each would be an awful pile of wealth for the seventh sons to inherit. Their portions haven't run to town houses of them now.

But the examples before us, the seventh son habit seems to wear itself out. Nature can be induced to too much of a good thing. Sir Richard Moreton, seventh son of the second Earl of Ducie, is the father of a family, and Lord Byng, second son of the second Earl of Stratford, and husband of the only child of the seventh son of the second Earl of Stratford, is the father of one child—all. So, unless the unexpected happens, there will be no second Lord Byng of Vimy; because, as every Canadian child knows, when there is special exercise of the royal prerogative, a patent of nobility can only be awarded on the heirs of the body, lawfully begotten of the original recipient of the same.

So we are to have a childless Rideau Hall, which is a pity. But Lady Byng has children of her fancy. Before the war she published two novels: "Barriers" and "Anne of the Thousands." From this day book-sellers in our midst will be asked for these rare and precious volumes. They will be searched for any reminiscence of the author's father's sojourn among us, as private secretary to Governor-General the Marquis of Dufferin. Her ladyship will be entitled to full membership of the Canadian Association of Authors; and as "Her Excellency" is but a courtesy title, she will be "Mrs. Archer Byng," and royalty which hedges her husband, she may pay her five dollars and not feel that she is stepping down.

Whether Lord Byng's sons would allow him to join the G.W.V.A., the G.A.U.V., or the A. and N. V. of C. remains to be seen. Could he countenance the demand for equal pensions for officers and rank and file? The private deserves—what doesn't he deserve? Parliament voted Gen. Byng thirty thousand pounds for his war services, over and above his regular pay and allowances. The gratuity question looks sick alongside that thirty thousand quid.

Shortit.

The name of the British Secretary for Home Affairs, Edward Shortt, would be shorter if he dropped a "t," but if it were shorter it would be longer.

Newfoundland.

One importance of Newfoundland is its geographical positions. St. John's, the chief port and capital of the country, is 1,000 miles nearer England, than is New York. In fact, it is only 1,460 miles from the coast of Ireland, so greatly does the Atlantic shrink off the coast of Newfoundland. That is why this unique country has had the distinction of receiving the first trans-Atlantic wireless message at St. John's in 1901; and also why the first non-stop trans-Atlantic airplane flight started from the same vicinity. The Cape Race light is the first greeting from America to ships on the northern route from Europe and it is the last to flash good-bye to the old world. Newfoundland is verily the stepping stone between America and Europe. —World's Work.

Wm. Fawcett Declines U. F. O. Nomination.

William Fawcett, Wolfe Island, defeated U. F. O. candidate at the last provincial elections, has been urged to accept the nomination for the Dominion parliament in the coming general elections. Several of the county leaders, who were intimately associated with him in the last campaign, and who appreciate his worth and the sacrifices he made for the farmers in that election, have approached him to stand once more, pledging every support. It will be remembered that Mr. Fawcett polled a splendid vote, considering that he had to meet a three-cornered fight. He has declined, however, to stand for nomination, and has so intimated to his friends.

OLDSMOBILE AND GRAY-DORT CARS

EXHIBITED BY HARTMAN & CARD AT NAPANEE FAIR

The Oldsmobile and Gray-Dort cars exhibited by Hartman & Card surely made a great display.

The Gray-Dort with its extreme lines and new model was very attractive, and is one of the cars that has stood the test as a light car.

The very attractive appearance of the Oldsmobile appealed to a great many intending buyers.

Why Oldsmobile values to-day are supreme. During the twenty-four years of Oldsmobile history, its makers have built their great success solely on the policy of full value always. Often this unswerving policy has benefitted thousands, but never has its advantages been so well exemplified as is in the Oldsmobile models of to-day. The Model 43-A four cylinder Oldsmobile has added new fame to a name that twenty-three years has been widely accepted as a guage whereby motor car values might be safely measured.

Many of its enthusiastic admirers assert emphatically that Oldsmobile "Four" upsets all previously established standards of value for cars of similar type. So sweeping a statement demands conclusive proof. This proof is at hand—at your disposal. It exists not so much on special features as in the measure of excellence ingrained into every detail of the car's design and manufacture.

Relativity.

The talk had turned on the subject of the arrival in England of Prof. Einstein.

"What's all this 'ere talk he's started about relativity?" said an old man.

"It's a new complaint of some kind, I'm thinkin'," answered his companion.

"Not so very new, neither," said a listener. "I've suffered from it, I reckon, ever since me mother-in-law has been me mother-in-law."

Our Buffaloes.

Owing to the increase in the buffalo herd at Wainwright, Alberta, 1,000 of these animals are to be slaughtered. A special building is being erected for the purpose. THANKSGIVING SERVICE

CHURCH OF ST. MARY MAGDALENE BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED ON SUNDAY LAST

ELOQUENT SERMON PREACHED BY THE VICAR

The annual Harvest-Home services were held in the Church of S. Mary Magdalene, on Sunday last, Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, M.A., Vicar, being the preacher at both services. His sermons were most eloquent, impressive and appropriate, the special music selected for the day being all that could be desired, and was rendered in such a manner as to be highly creditable to the organist and choir.

The church was beautifully decorated with fruit, flowers and vegetables giving the sacred edifice a bright and cheerful appearance, thoroughly in keeping with the joyous service held within its walls that day.

At the evening service one was impressed that better light within the building would have shown the decorations to greater advantage. The nave of the church is lighted by six powerful electric lamps and in a general way they give excellent illumination, but if a worshipper is situated, say half between two of these lamps, it is almost impossible to read a prayer or hymn book of ordinary type.

Along the walls on both sides of the church are some handsome brass memorial gas fixtures, but with the passing of the gas from this town, their usefulness for the present is gone. The writer takes the liberty of suggesting that these fixtures be fitted with electric lamps and used for an improvement of the lighting of the church; and by doing so the intentions of the donors of the memorials would be carried out. A more powerful light on the golden cross above the chancel arch would be another improvement.

Owing to sickness in many families, and other causes, the attendance at the evening service was not as large as it should have been. Those of the congregation who failed to be present missed a rare treat, both as regards the services and the masterly sermon preached by the Vicar, from the text, Galatians VI, 7-8. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

Eels.

Eels do not breed in fresh water. All of the myriads of them found in the American streams and lakes were originally hatched in the sea. They are by origin marine fishes. When very young they do not look in the least like the eels with which we are familiar. They are flat and ribbon-like. This is a larval stage of development. When they have assumed adult form they leave the sea and run up into the rivers. When big enough to breed they go back to the sea, and there the feminine eel sheds her eggs. Thus the cycle of their lives is accomplished. One understands, then, why there were no eels in Lake Erie until they were planted there. They could not climb over the Niagara cataract. Baby eels were caught in deep-sea dredges many years before they were recognized as eels, their appearance being so different. Even now very little is known about their spawning grounds, and hence the contemplated investigation.

The Sea Otter.

The sea otter, the animal of most beautiful fur, once so plentiful in Alaskan waters, is almost extinct. Traded for the hundreds of thousands a century ago, pelts offered in 1920 were: One in St. Louis, three in New York and fifteen in London. The fur is so fine, lustrous and durable that a good skin has always commanded from $450 to $1,000. Last year the pelts were not of first grade; several were taken from the bodies of dead otter found on the seashore, but the average price at London was about $1,750.

TOLD NAME AT LAST.

Dying Burglar Tried to Keep Identity a Secret.

HAMILTON, Sept. 19. — Death's approach forced a confession from the lips of the burglar shot by Chief Lee Smith at Burlington early last Thursday morning. A few minutes before he died at St. Joseph's Hospital at 7 o'clock Saturday night, he told Dr. T. W. Peart of Burlington and Archdeacon Forneret that his right name was "Matt" Reid, and his home is Oshawa. His case was a unique one, in that for more than 70 hours, from the time he was shot until a few minutes before he died, he vowed he would not disclose his identity nor tell the name of his pal, who made good his escape when Chief Smith surprised the pair in the rear of a store at Burlington.

Reid was shot once through the groin and lower intestines. He was 54 years of age, and made a stout fight for life. Not until Friday night did he appreciate that he was slowly dying. He refused to tell his right name, because he wished to shield his wife, young daughter and son from disgrace. On Saturday evening, however, he whispered who he was.

It is understood that two other men were with Reid when he was shot on Thursday morning. Their identity is known, and they are being sought by the police. Chief Smith expressed the deepest regret that Reid had succumbed to his wounds, but he said attempted burglaries in Burlington had been too frequent of late. Only six weeks ago Chief Smith was compelled to use his revolver in capturing a burglar.

Lived In Oshawa.

OSHAWA, Sept. 19. — Nashal Reid, who died in Hamilton Hospital Saturday from wounds received when shot by Chief Smith of Burlington while attempting to burglarize a store in that town, in company with another man, lived here, and leaves a wife and three children. He left here about June 10, and his whereabouts were unknown by his wife until she was advised by the chief here. He was an employe of the McLaughlin Motor Car Co. as machinist, and was regarded as a faithful and most efficient worker, residing here many years and owning his home. He had been laid off before leaving Oshawa, and later when the company sent for him to return to work his address was unknown. He had never been in trouble in Oshawa, and was well known to many here.

SENATOR EDWARDS DEAD.

He Was Prominent Both in Business and Politics.

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—Hon. Senator Edwards, one of Canada's best-known lumbermen and politicians, died at his home, Sussex street, at 2:30 Saturday morning in his 78th year. For several years he has been suffering from heart trouble, but only during the last month had his health been seriously impaired.

Senator Edwards, in the business world, will perhaps be best remembered by the part he played in the sixty-million-dollar merger with the Riordon Paper & Pulp Co., which took place last year, when the interests of W. C. Edwards, Gilmour and Hughson, the Ticonderoga Pulp & Paper Co. and the Kippawa Company were sold.

The late Hon. William Cameron Edwards was a son of the late William Edwards, a native of Portsmouth, England, who came to Canada about 1820, settling in the Township of Clarence, County of Russell, Ont., and his wife, Ann Cameron, a native of Fort William. He was born in Clarence, May 7, 1844, and was educated at the Ottawa Grammar School. The late Senator was an extensive lumber manufacturer, and took a practical interest in agriculture, being for many years president of the Russell Agricultural Society. He was a director of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation, and was intimately connected with several other companies. He established the lumber firm of W. C. Edwards and Company in 1888.

He was an unsuccessful candidate for the House of Commons in Russell at the general election in 1882, but was elected as a Liberal at the general elections in 1891, 1896 and 1900. In January, 1885, he married Catharine M. Wilson, daughter of William Wilson, Cumberland, Ont. He was summoned to the Senate on March 17, 1903.

Both as a member of the Commons and the Senate he took an active part in the Parliamentary debates and strongly advocated a lower tariff.

In Event of Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary Not Being Able to Attend Disarmament Conference, Several Conspicuous Figures In Parliamentary Life Are Being Prominently Mentioned.

LONDON, Sept. 19. — Premier Lloyd George is expected shortly to name the British plenipotentiaries to the Washington conference.

Unless a successful end is reached in the protracted Irish negotiations and some means is found to ameliorate the unemployment situation, the Prime Minister himself will not likely be the head for the delegation. At best, it is generally believed, he will be able to attend only the final deliberations of the conference. There are a number of names, however, which are being canvassed as possibilities. Arthur J. Balfour is the member of the Government who would head the British delegation in the event that the Premier cannot do so himself. The success of his recent mission to the United States, in addition to his many months as First Lord of the Admiralty during the war, make him a favorite.

Lord Lee, the present First Lord, is considered to be a certain choice if he fully recovers from his recent illness. Andrew Bonar Law, who retired from the Government last year, owing to illness and who is now fully restored to health, is also mentioned, while a one-time Liberal, Winston Churchill, now an eighteen karat Conservative, is also mentioned, not because of his ability as a negotiator, but because he has been both First Lord of the Admiralty and Secretary for Sir Edward Gordon Hewart, one of the leaders at the Bar is also suggested. Despite organized labor's demand, made at the recent Labor Party Congress, that labor should have a spokesman at the conference, there is no indication at the present time that the Government will accede to the demand. In Conservative quarters the names of Lord Grey and former Premier Asquith are proposed. Lord Robert Cecil is no longer regarded as a possibility.

Mr. Lloyd George may, however, upset all speculation and interlard the delegation with one or more Liberals, but there is little expectation of that being done in part. Lord Curzon, the Foreign Secretary, may not be able to go. In fact, in well-informed quarters it was said unless there is a vast improvement in the European situation, particularly in the Near and Middle East, it will practically be impossible for him to cross the Atlantic. The Foreign Office, under the circumstances, might be represented by Sir William Tyrrell, counsellor of the embassy at Washington.

SPLIT IN GERMANY.

Bavaria Is Drifting Farther From Berlin.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—By forcing Dr. Wirth to explain what they themselves know are outrageously untrue statements made in a public speech by Herr Gandorfer, leader of the Bavarian peoples' party, the Bavarians have put the Chancellor on the defensive in the struggle between that state and the Reich Government.

Herr Oswald declared that Berlin is "stomach hungry" for Bavarian money, with which to pay reparations and fulfill obligations. He also charges Herr Wirth with acting under Entente orders, and attacked the Government anew when ambulito Munich. Herr Weismann has resigned and Munich is dancing on his political bones.

Simultaneously comes the news from Munich that the Bavarian people's party has decided on a program with the following five points: First, the coalition with the Social Democrats; second, to stand by the present reactionary coalition; third, to put Gustav Kar in power.

The purpose of this program is to gain additional autonomy for Bavaria, and create a state president, who will be empowered to issue decrees that will hold good in that state. Constitutional changes looking towards this are sought.

Gets Radium Monopoly.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—An agreement concluded between the Imperial and Foreign Corporation, of London, and the Czecho-Slovakian Governments, whereby the corporation gets a commercial monopoly of the entire Slovakian state for the radium output, will interest all Canadians doing medical research work, as the new company is free to trade in radium products for any part of the world. The yearly output of the Joachim Ethel mines, near Carlsbad, is about four grammes. Half of the radium produced during a period of fifty years belongs to the corporation, who guarantees the capital for same, the other half to the Slovakian Government for research in their Government laboratory.

Splendid Immigrants.

QUEBEC, Sept. 19. — Splendid looking mothers, tall, husky, alert fathers, and many, many bright and cheerful youngsters—all from England, Ireland and Scotland, comprised the 749 third-class passengers landed on Saturday from the steamship Melita.

For six months has the local immigration station been thronged with such a fine body of immigrants. There were very few aliens aboard. Prominent on the passenger list was the name of Sir Robert Falconer, of Toronto.

DE VALERA IS DODGING

His Stand is Certain to Block Irish Peace.

Says That Ireland Must Be Recognized as Sovereign State Before the Delegates Attend Parleys. But Premier Lloyd George Remains Firm In His Refusal and Deadlock Exists.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Mr. Lloyd George on Sunday added another to the brisk fire of telegrams between Dublin and Gairloch, which leaved Eamonn de Valera's search for a formula enabling him to accept the invitation to a conference still unsatisfied, and the position on the Irish question is virtually the same as on Friday.

In a message to the Irish Republican leader, the British Prime Minister remains firm in refusing to meet the Irish delegates as representing an independent and sovereign state, and declares that unless that section of Mr. de Valera's reply insisting upon the delegates acting as representatives of an independent Ireland, was withdrawn, a conference between the members of the British Cabinet and the Sinn Fein plenipotentiaries would be impossible.

Notwithstanding the firm tone of Mr. Lloyd George's telegram, it is interpreted as displaying solicitude to furnish Mr. de Valera a favorable opening for abandoning his present attitude.

Premier Lloyd George Sunday afternoon telegraphed de Valera at Dublin as follows:

"I received your telegram last night. I observe that it does not modify the claim that your delegates should meet us as representatives of a sovereign and independent state.

"You made no such condition in advance when you came to see me in July. I invited you then to meet me, in the words of my letter, as the chosen leader of a great majority in Southern Ireland,' and you accepted the invitation.

"Throughout the early outset of our conversations I told you that we looked to Ireland to own allegiance to the British throne, and to make her future that of a member of the British commonwealth. That was the basis of our proposal, and we cannot alter it.

"The status which you now claim in advance for your delegates is, in effect, a repudiation of that basis. I am prepared to meet your delegates as I met them in July, in the capacity of 'chosen spokesmen' for your people, to discuss the association of Ireland with the British commonwealth.

"My colleagues and I cannot meet them as representatives of a sovereign and independent state without disloyalty on our part to the throne and Empire. I must, therefore, say that, unless the second paragraph in your letter of the twelfth is withdrawn, a conference between us is impossible.—D. Lloyd George."

The second paragraph referred to in Lloyd George's telegram was that part of de Valera's letter which reads:

"In the final note we deem it our duty to reaffirm that our position is, and must be, as we have defined it throughout this correspondence. Our nation has formally declared its independence and recognizes itself as a sovereign state. It is only as representatives of that state, and as its chosen guardians, that we have authority or powers to act on behalf of our people. As regards the principle of government by consent of the governed, in the very nature of things, it must be the basis of any agreement that will achieve the purpose we have at heart—that is, the final reconciliation of our nation with yours. We have suggested no interpretation of that principle, save its everyday interpretation, the sense, for example, in which it was understood by the plain men and women of the world, when on January 5, 1918, you said:

"The settlement of Europe must be based on such grounds of reason and justice as will give some promise of stability. Therefore, it is that we feel that government with the consent of the governed must be the basis of any territorial settlement in this war."

Killed on Way from Dance.

GUELPH, Sept. 19.—Struck and dragged by a C.P.R. freight train at an early hour Saturday morning, Benedict C. Cooke, assistant factory manager of the F. E. Partridge Rubber Co., was found lying in a dying condition 100 feet west of Allan's bridge, at six o'clock. He died two hours later at the General Hospital without the least consciousness having sustained.

The supposition is that Mr. Cooke, who resides with his mother, was on his way home from the 34th reunion dance in the Armories, by way of Allan's bridge, when the train came along, and he decided to board the freight for the purpose of riding as far as the Eramosa bridge. In boarding the train he evidently slipped and fell.

When found Mr. Cooke was terribly managled, both legs being almost completely severed from the body. An inquest was convened on Saturday afternoon, but no evidence was taken.

Governor Angry.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 19.—Governor Carter of the County Jail has forwarded to the county Council his resignation from his post, to be effective as soon as arrangements can be made to relieve him of his duties. It is understood that the intention of the authorities was to continue the governor in office, but he has repeatedly within the past year intimated his desire to retire. During the recent investigation into the escape of the Murrells the governor was at first rather gruellingly questioned by Inspector W. Noxon of Toronto later, when recalled, he was courteously dealt with, and his protestations that he would quit were allowed over. Further consideration, however, has caused the governor to conclude that he will relieve himself of the responsibilities the duties of a jailer impose.

Invade Australia.

SYDNEY, Sept. 19. — Australians are interestedly discussing a scheme proposed by Sir Joseph Carruthers, Australian publicist and financier, for the settling of 1,000,000 Englishtillers of the soil upon 1,000,000 farms in Australia, through the creation of a fund of $150,000,000 to be raised in equal proportions by Australia and Great Britain. He argued that the scheme would permit the immigration to Australia of a large number of the unemployed service men of the kingdom to some of the richest land in the world, which as yet has scarcely been populated. Sir Joseph stressed the value to Great Britain of the man power brought to Australia by the undertaking. He declared that it would be best for the United Kingdom to support such a scheme than to build warships in contemplation of Australia's danger, should the Pacific become a war zone.

A voice spoke his name. He turned. The slim white presence again, holding toward him a slip of paper.

"The check, Mr. Minot—$35. Is that correct?"

"Correct. It's splendid, because I'm never going to cash it. I'm going to keep it"—

"Really, Mr. Minot, I must say good"—

He came closer. Thacker and Jephson faded. New York was far away. He was young, and the moon was shining—

"going to keep it—always. The first letter you ever wrote me"—

"And the last, Mr. Minot. Really I must go. Good night."

He stood alone with the absurd check in his trembling fingers. Slowly the memory of Trimmer came back. A bomb? What sort of a bomb?

Well, he had given his word. There was no way out; he must protect old Jephson's interests. But might he not wish the enemy success? He stared off in the direction the advertising wizard had gone.

"Trimmer, old boy," he muttered, "here's to your pitching arm!"

CHAPTER V.

Trimmer Throws His Bomb.

IT happened to be as a very serious minded girl that Miss Meyrick opened her eyes on Tuesday morning. She lay for a long time watching the Florida sunshine, spoken of so tenderly in the railroad's come on books, as it danced across the foot of her bed. Today the Lilieth was to steam into San Marco harbor! Today her bridegroom was to smile his slow British smile on her once more! She recalled these facts without the semblance of a thrill.

Mr. Minot, after a lonesome if abundant breakfast, was at this moment strolling across the hotel courtyard toward yesterday morning's New York papers. As he walked the pert promises of Mr. Trimmer filled his mind. What was the proposition Mr. Trimmer had in view? How would it affect the approaching wedding? And what course of action should the representative of Jephson pursue when it was revealed? For in the sensible light of morning Dick Minot realized that while he remained in San Marco as the guardian of Jephson's interests he must do his duty. Adorable Miss Meyrick might be, but any change of mind on her part must be over his dead body. A promise was a promise.

At the newsstand Minot met Jack Paddock, jaunty, with a gardenia in his buttonhole and the atmosphere of prosperity that goes with it.

"I haven't seen you since we left college, have I?" said Paddock. "Well, Dick, for a couple of years I tried to make good doing fiction. I turned them out by the yard—nice quiet little tea table yarns, with snappy dialogue. Once I got $80 for a story. It was hard work—and I always yearn for the purple, you know."

"I know," said Minot gravely.

"Well, I've struck it, Dick. I've struck the deep purple with a loud, if sickening, thud. Hist! The graft I mentioned yesterday." He glanced over his shoulder. "Remember Mrs. Bruce, the wittiest hostess in San Marco?"

"Of course I do."

"Well, I write her repartee for her."

"Her what?"

"Her repartee—her dialogue—the bright talk she convulses dinner tables with. Instead of putting my smart stuff into stories at eighty per I sell it to Mrs. Bruce at—I'd be ashamed to tell you, old man. I remarked that it was essentially soft. It is."

"This is a new one on me," said Minot, dazed.

A delighted smile spread over Mr. Paddock's handsome face.

"Thanks. That's the beauty of it. I'm a pioneer. There'll be others, but I was the first. Consider the situation. Here's Mrs. Bruce, loaded with diamonds and money, but tongue-tied in company, with a wit developed in a small town. Bright, but struggling, young author comes to her—offers to make her conversation the sensation of the place for a few pesos."

"You did that?"

"Yes; I ask posterity to remember it was I who invented the graft. Mrs. Bruce fell on my fair young neck. Now she gives me in advance a list of her engagements, and for the important ones I devise her line of talk. Then, as I'm usually present at the occasion, I swing things round for her and give her her cues. If I'm not there she has to manage it herself. It's a great life, only a bit of a strain on me. I have to remember not to be clever in company. If I forget and spring a good one she jumps on me proper afterward for not giving it to her."

"By the way," Paddock said, "you haven't told me what brought you south?"

"Business, Jack," said Minot. "It's a secret. Perhaps I can tell you later."

"Business? I thought, of course, you came for pleasure."

"There'll be no pleasure in this trip for me," said Minot bitterly.

"Oh, won't there?" Paddock laughed. "Wait till you hear Mrs. Bruce talk. See you later, old man."

At luncheon they brought Mr. Minot a telegram from a certain seventeenth floor in New York, an explosive telegram. It read:

Nonsense. Nobody here to take your place. See it through. You've given your word. THACKER.

Gloomily Mr. Minot considered. What was there to do but see it through? Even though Thacker should send another to take his place, could he stay to woo the lady he adored? Hardly. In that event he would have to go away—never see her again—never hear her voice. If he stayed as Jephson's representative he might know the glory of her nearness for a week, might thrill at her smile even while he worked to wed her to Lord Harrowby. And perhaps— Who could say? Hard as he might work, might he not be thwarted? It was possible.

So after lunch he sent Thacker a reassuring message, promising to stay. And at the end of a dull hour in the lobby he set out to explore the town.

The Mermaid tea house stood on the water front, with a small second floor balcony that looked out on the harbor. Passing that way at 4:30 that afternoon Minot heard a voice call to him. He glanced up.

"Oh, Mr. Minot, won't you come into my parlor?" Cynthia Meyrick smiled down on him.

"Splendid!" Minot laughed. "I walk forlorn through this old Spanish town. Suddenly a lattice is thrown wide, a fair hand beckons. I dash within."

"Thanks for dashing," Miss Meyrick greeted him on the balcony. "I was finding it dreadfully dull. But I'm afraid the Spanish romance is a little lacking. There s no moonlight, no lattice, no mantilla, no Spanish beauty."

"No matter," Minot answered. "I never did care for Spanish types. They flash like a skyrocket, then tumble in the dark. Now, the home grown girls"—

"And nothing but tea," she interrupted. "Will you have a cup?"

"Thanks. Was it really very dull?"

"Yes. This book was to blame." She held up a novel.

"What's the matter with it?"

"Oh, it's one of those books in which the hero and heroine are forever 'gazing into each other's eyes.' And they understand perfectly. But the reader doesn't. I've reached one of those gazing matches now."

She was interrupted by the shrill triumphant cry of a yacht's siren at her back. She turned her head.

"The Lilieth," she said.

"Exactly," said Minot. "The bride groom cometh."

Another silence.

"You'll want to go to meet him," Minot said, rising. He stood looking at the boat, flashing gayly in the sunshine. "I'll go with you as far as the street."

"But—you know Lord Harrowby Meet him with me."

"It seems hardly the thing"—

"Fiddle! I'm not sentimental. And surely Allin's not."

"Then I must be," said Minot. "Really—I'd rather not"—

They went together to the street. At the parting of the ways Minot turned to her.

"I promised Lord Harrowby in New York," he told her, "that you would have your lamp trimmed and burning."

She looked up at him. A mischievous light came into her eyes.

"Please—have you a match?" she asked.

It was too much. Minot turned and fled down the street. He did not once look back, though it seemed to him that she felt every step the girl took across that narrow pier to her fiance's side.

As he dressed for dinner that night his telephone rang, and Miss Meyrick's voice sounded over the wire.

"Harrowby remembers you very pleasantly. Won't you join us at dinner?"

"Are you sure an outsider"— he began.

"Nonsense. Mr. Martin Wall is to be there."

"Ah, thank you! I'll be delighted," Minot replied.

In the lobby Harrowby seized his hand.

"My dear chap, you're looking fit. Great to see you again! By the way, you know Martin Wall?"

"Yes. Mr. Wall and I met just before the splash," Minot smiled. He shook hands with Wall, unaccountably genial and beaming. "The Hudson, Mr. Wall, is a bit chilly in February."

"My dear fellow," said Wall, "can you ever forgive me? A thousand apologies. It was all a mistake, a horrible mistake."

"I felt like a rotter when I heard about it," Harrowby put in. "Martin mistook you for some one else. You must forgive us both."

"Freely," said Minot. "And I want to apologize for my suspicions of you, Lord Harrowby."

"Thanks, old chap."

"I never doubted you would come—after I saw Miss Meyrick.

"The Lilieth," she said.

"She is a ripper, isn't she?" said Harrowby enthusiastically.

Martin Wall shot a quick, almost hostile glance at Minot.

"You've noticed that yourself, haven't you?" he said in Minot's ear.

At which point the Meyrick family arrived, and they all went in to dinner.

It was after dinner when they all stood together in the lobby a moment before separating that Henry Trimmer made good his promise out of a clear sky.

Cynthia Meyrick stood facing the others, talking brightly, when suddenly her face paled, and the flippant words died on her lips. They all turned instantly.

Through the lobby, in a buzz of excited comment, a man walked slowly, his eyes on the ground. He was a tall, blond Englishman, not unlike Lord Harrowby in appearance. His gray eyes when he raised them for a moment were listless, his shoulders stooped and weary, and he had a long, drooping mustache that hung like a weeping willow above a particularly cheerless stream.

However, it was not his appearance that excited comment and caused Miss Meyrick to pale. Hung over his shoulders was a pair of sandwich boards such as the outcasts of a great city carry up and down the streets, and on the front board, turned full toward Miss Meyrick's dinner party, was printed in bold black letters:

I
AM
HARROWBY

With a little gasp and a murmured apology Miss Meyrick turned quickly and entered the elevator. Lord Harrowby stood like a man of stone, gazing at the sandwich boards.

It was at this point that the hotel detective sufficiently recovered himself to lay eager hands on the audacious sandwich man and propel him violently from the scene.

In the background Mr. Minot perceived Henry Trimmer, puffing excitedly on a big black cigar, a triumphant look on his face.

Mr. Trimmer's bomb was thrown.

There was suppressed excitement in the hotel next day when Lord Harrowby refused to meet the claimant to his title.

The drowsiness of a Florida midday was in the air. Mr. Minot lay down on his bed. A hundred thoughts were his—the brown of Miss Meyrick's eyes, the sincerity of Mr. Trimmer's voice when he spoke of his proposition, the fishy look of Lord Harrowby refusing to meet his long lost brother. Things grew hazy. Mr. Minot slept.

On leaving Lord Harrowby's rooms Mr. Martin Wall did not immediately set out for the Lilieth, on which he lived in preference to the hotel. Instead he took a brisk turn about the spacious lobby of the De la Fax.

The courtyard of the Hotel de la Fax was fringed by a series of modish shops, with doors opening both on the courtyard and on the narrow street outside. Among these, occupying a corner room, was the very smart jewel shop of Ostby & Blake. Occasionally in the winter resorts of the south one may find jewelry shops whose stocks would bear favorable competition with

"In 1919, I was taken with Bronchial Asthma and no one knows what I suffered with it during the winter. I began having Choking Spells—gasping for breath and could not speak. I would have one of these bad spells in the evening, one during the night, and one in the morning. The doctor said he could do nothing for me.

"In the spring of 1920, I started taking "Fruit-a-tives" and in a few days, the choking spells stopped, and I have had none since May 7th, 1920. I have so wanted to tell other sufferers who have the same trouble about "Fruit-a-tives" for I know how they must suffer.

Fifth avenue. Ostby & Blake conducted such an establishment.

For a moment before the show window of this shop Mr. Wall paused, with the eye of a connoisseur studied the brilliant display within. His whole manner changed. The air of boredom with which he had surveyed his fellow travelers of the lobby disappeared On the instant he was alert, alive, almost eager. Jauntily he strolled into the store. A tall man was in charge.

From outside came the shrill scream of a child, interrupting. The tall man turned quickly to the window.

"My God"— he moaned.

"What is it?" Mr. Wall sought to look over his shoulder. "Automobile"—

"My little girl," cried the clerk in agony. He turned to Martin Wall, hesitating. His sallow face was white now, his lips trembled. Doubtfully he gazed into the frank open countenance of Martin Wall. And then—

"I leave you in charge!" he shouted and fled past Mr. Wall to the street.

For a moment Martin Wall stood, frozen to the spot. His eyes were unbelieving. His little Cupid's bow mouth was wide open.

Mr. Wall's knees grew weak. He felt a strange prickly sensation all over him. He took a step and was staring at the finest display of black pearls south of Maiden Lane, New York.

His Eyes Fell Upon the Door of a Huge Safety Vault.

Quickly he turned away. His eyes fell upon the door of a huge safety vault. It was swinging open!

Little beads of perspiration began to pop out on the forehead of Martin Wall. His heart was hammering like that of a youth who sees after a long separation his lady love. His eyes grew glassy.

Then Mr. Wall shut his lips firmly and thrust both of his hands deep into his trousers pockets. He stood there in the middle of that gorgeous room, a fat figure of a man suffering a cruel, inhuman agony.

He was still standing thus when the tall man came running back. Apprehension clouded that sallow face.

"It was very kind of you." The small eyes of the clerk darted everywhere, then came back to Martin Wall. "I'm obliged—why, what's the matter, sir?"

Martin Wall passed his hand across his eyes as a man banishing a terrible dream.

"The little girl?" he asked.

"Hardly a scratch," said the clerk, pointing to the smiling child at his side. "It was lucky, wasn't it?" He was behind the counter now, studying the trays unprotected on the showcase.

CHAPTER VI.

Chain Lightning's Collar.

MR. TOM STACY of the Manhattan club, half dozing on the veranda of his establishment, was rejoiced to see his old friend Martin Wall crossing the pavement toward him.

"Well, Martin"— he began. And then a look of concern came into his face. "Good heavens, man, what ails you?"

Mr. Wall sank like a wet rag to the steps.

"Tom," he said, "a terrible thing has just happened. I was left alone in Ostby & Blake's jewelry shop."

"Alone?" cried Mr. Stacy. "You—alone?"

"Absolutely alone."

Mr. Stacy leaned over.

"Are you leaving town—in a hurry?" he asked.

Gloomily Mr. Wall shook his head.

"He put me on my honor," he complained—"left me in charge of the shop. Can you beat it? Of course after that, I—well, you know somehow I couldn't do it. I tried, but I couldn't."

Mr. Stacy threw back his head, and his raucous laughter smote the lazy summer afternoon.

"I can't help it," he gasped. "The funniest thing I ever—you—the best stone thief in America alone in charge of $3,000,000 worth of the stuff!"

Cheeks burning, eyes popping, Mr. Minot, hiding behind the curtains in a room overhead, watched them disappear into the Manhattan club.

Here was news indeed—Lord Harrowby's boon companion the ablest jewel thief in America! Just what did that mean?

Putting on coat and hat, he hurried to the hotel office and there wrote a cablegram:

Situation suspicious. Are you dead certain H. is on the level?

An hour later, in his London office, Mr. Jephson read this message carefully three times.

The Villa Jasmine, Mrs. Bruce's winter home, stood in a park of palms and shrubbery some two blocks from the Hotel de la Fax. Mr. Minot walked thither that evening in the resplendent company of Jack Paddock.

"You'll enjoy Mrs. Bruce tonight," Paddock confided. "I've done her some rather good lines, if I do say it that shouldn't."

"On what topics?" asked Minot.

"International marriage—jewels—by the way, I don't suppose you know that Miss Cynthia Meyrick is to appear for the first time wearing the famous Harrowby necklace?"

"I didn't even know there was a necklace," Minot returned.

"Ah, such ignorance! But then you don't wander much in feminine society, do you? Mrs. Bruce told me about it this morning. Chain Lightning's collar."

"Chain Lightning's what?"

"Ah, my boy"—Mr. Paddock lighted a cigarette—"you should go round more in royal circles! List, commoner, while I relate. It seems that the Earl of Raybrook is a giddy old sport with a gambling streak a yard wide. In his young days he loved the Lady Evelyn Holloway. Lady Evelyn had a horse entered in a Derby about that time—name, Chain Lightning. And the Earl of Raybrook wagered a diamond necklace against a kiss that Chain Lightning would lose."

"What's that giving big odds?" inquired Minot.

"Not if you believe the stories of Lady Evelyn's beauty. Well, it happened before Tammany politicians began avenging Ireland on Derby day. Chain Lightning won, and the Earl came across with the necklace. Afterward he married Lady Evelyn"—

"To get back the necklace?"

"Cynic. And, being a rather racy old boy, he referred to the necklace thereafter as Chain Lightning's collar. It got to be pretty well known in England by that name. I believe it is considered a rather neat piece of jewelry among the English nobility, whose sparklers aren't what they were before the steel business in Pittsburgh turned out a good thing."

"Chain Lightning's collar?" mused Minot. "I presume Lady Evelyn was the mother of the present Lord Harrowby?"

"So 'tis rumored," smiled Paddock, "though I take it his lordship favors his father's looks."

They walked along for a moment in silence. The story of this necklace of diamonds could bring but one thing to Minot's thoughts—Martin Wall drooping on the steps of the Manhattan club while old Stacy roared with joy. He considered. Should he tell Mr. Paddock? No, he would wait.

The whir of a motor behind them caused the two young men to turn. Then Mr. Minot saw her coming up the path toward him—coming up that fantastic avenue of palms—tall, fair, white, a lovely figure in a lovely setting!

Ah, yes—Lord Harrowby! He walked at her side, nonchalant, distinguished, almost as tall as a popular illustrator thinks a man in evening clothes should be. Truly, they made a handsome couple. They were to wed. Mr. Minot himself had sworn they were to wed.

He kept the bitterness from his tone as he greeted them there amid the soft magic of the Florida night. Together they went inside. In the center of a magnificent hallway they found Mrs. Bruce standing, like stout Cortez on his Darien peak, triumphant amid the glory of her gold.

Mr. Bruce slipped out of the shadows into the weariness of another formal dinner. Mrs. Bruce glittered, and he wrote the checks. He was a scraggly little man who sometimes sat for hours at a time in silence. There were those unkind enough to say that he sought back, trying to recall the reason that had led him to marry Mrs. Bruce.

When he beheld Miss Cynthia Meyrick and knew that he was to take her in to dinner Mr. Bruce brightened perceptibly. Some save a blind and deaf man could have failed to. Cocktails consumed, the party turned toward the dining room. Except for the Meyricks, Martin Wall, Lord Harrowby and Paddock, Dick Minot knew none of them. There were a couple of colorless men from New York who, when they died, would be referred to as "prominent

A half hour later Mrs. Bruce's dinner party was scattered among the palms and flowers of her gorgeous lawn. Mr. Minot had fallen again to the elder girl from Omaha, and blithely for her he was displaying his Broadway ignorance of horticulture. Suddenly out of the night came a scream. Instantly when he heard it Mr. Minot knew who had uttered it.

Unceremoniously he parted from the Omaha beauty and sped over the lawn. But, quick as he was, Lord Harrowby was quicker, for when Minot came up he saw Harrowby bending over Miss Meyrick, who sat upon a wicker bench.

"Cynthia, what is it?" Harrowby was saying.

Cynthia Meyrick felt wildly of her shining hair.

"Your necklace," she gasped—"Chain Lightning's collar! He took it! He took it!"

"Who?"

"I don't know! A man!

"A man!" Reverent repetition by feminine voices out of the excited group.

"He leaped out at me there—by that tree—pinioned my arms—snatched the necklace! I couldn't see his face. It happened in the shadow."

"No matter," Harrowby replied. "Don't give it another thought, my child."

"But how can I help"—

"I shall telephone the police at once," announced Spencer Meyrick.

"I beg you'll do nothing of the sort," expostulated Lord Harrowby. "It would be a great inconvenience. The thing wasn't worth the publicity that would result. I insist that the police be kept out of this."

Argument—loud on Mr. Meyrick's part—ensued. Suggestions galore were offered by the guests. But in the end Lord Harrowby had his way. It was agreed not to call in the police.

Mr. Minot, looking up, saw a sneering smile on the face of Martin Wall. In a flash he knew the truth.

With Aunt Mary calling loudly for smelling salts and the whole party more or less in confusion, the return to the house started. Mr. Paddock walked at Minot's side.

"Rather looks as though Chain Lightning's collar had choked off our gayety," he mumbled. "Served her right for wearing the thing in her hair. She spoiled two corking lines for me by not wearing it where you'd naturally expect a necklace to be worn."

Minot maneuvered so as to intercept Lord Harrowby under the portico.

"May I speak with you a moment?" he inquired. Harrowby bowed, and they stepped into the shadows of the drive.

"Lord Harrowby," said Minot, trying to keep the excitement from his voice, "I have certain information about one of the guests here this evening that I believe would interest you. Your lordship has been badly bufaloed. One of your fellow diners at Mrs. Bruce's table holds the title of the ablest jewel thief in America!"

He watched keenly to catch Lord Harrowby's start of surprise. Alas, he caught nothing of the sort.

"Nonsense," said his lordship nonchalantly. "You mustn't let your imagination carry you away, dear chap."

"Imagination nothing! I know what I'm talking about." And then Minot told succinctly, "Sorry to bore you with this."

His lordship laughed.

"Right-o, old fellow. I'm not interested."

"But haven't you just lost"—

"A diamond necklace? Yes." They had reached a particularly dark and secluded spot beneath the canopy of palm leaves. Harrowby turned suddenly and put his hands on Minot's shoulders. "Mr. Minot," he said, "you are here to see that nothing interferes with my marriage to Miss Meyrick. I trust you are determined to do your duty to your employers?"

"Absolutely. That is why"—

"Then," replied Harrowby quickly, "I am going to ask you to take charge of this for me."

Suddenly Minot felt something cold and glassy in his hand. Startled, he looked down. Even in the dark Chain Lightning's collar sparkled like the famous ray that it was.

"Your lordship!"

"I cannot explain now. I can only tell you it is quite necessary that you help me at this time if you wish to do your full duty by Mr. Jephson."

"Who took this necklace from Miss Meyrick's hair?" asked Minot hotly.

"I did. I assure you it was the only way to prevent our plans from going awry. Please keep it until I ask for it."

And, turning, Lord Harrowby walked rapidly toward the house.

"The brute!" Angrily Mr. Minot stood turning the necklace over in his hand. "So he frightened the girl he is to marry—the girl he is supposed to love"—

What should he do—go to her and tell her of Harrowby's amiable accomplishments? He could hardly do that—Harrowby had taken him into his confidence—and, besides, there was Jephson of the great bald head, the Peter Pan eyes. Nothing to do but wait.

Unemployment--Freight Rates --and the Railways

The indicator of true prosperity is Employment. The presence of unemployed men, unemployed machinery, unemployed railway equipment, and unemployed capital in Canada is reason enough, therefore, for every large Canadian business interest to study its relation to the general problem—to see whether anything in its power remains to be done to advance the general prosperity of the country.

In this connection the railway companies have been specially interested. Freight Rates touch everyone, and, because they touch everyone, are always close to the public consciousness and more conveniently attacked than the true causes of depression which are less easily discerned and more difficult, if not indeed impossible, to control.

Furthermore, the railways while joining with everyone else in the general agitation for deflation of prices and wages—found themselves recently in the seemingly anomalous position of demurring when it was proposed to lower railway rates. They were made to appear as though they were endeavoring with one hand to put wages down and with the other hand to keep rates up, thereby securing for their own treasuries instead of passing on to the Canadian public, any saving effected on the wage rolls. They were placed in the equivocal position of having urged blanket INCREASES of rates when wages went up—and of opposing blanket DECREASES when wages were seemingly decreased.

The following statement is offered, therefore, with a view to exhibiting what the railways believe to be the true relation of railway freight rates to the question of unemployment, outlining the history of Canadian rates, explaining something of the groundwork of rate-making and clearing up the seeming anomalies referred to, so that none may remain as possible causes for future weakening of confidence between the public and the carriers.

I---Freight Rates and Unemployment.

With a large part of the world's population idle, or only partially efficient owing to wars or disturbed political conditions—with inventors in many parts of the world almost afraid to expose their inventions, organizers afraid to organize, capital hesitating to invest—a corresponding proportion of world production is missing. The total of goods available for the world is less than normal. Those who do not produce—speaking generally—cannot buy. Few purchasers—few sales; few sales—little employment. This is the great world-wide fundamental of the unemployment situation.

The condition is international, not local to Canada. If Canadian railway rates were a determining factor in making the sale prices of our export goods, in other words if Canadian prices were higher in international markets than the goods of our competitors, then railway rates would be contributing to unemployment in Canada by depressing our sales abroad, lowering the number of our customers, and the orders coming to our producers.

But in the first place the real effect of freight rates on price making is a debatable point. This is proven

(1) by the fact that prices FELL last fall after the rates were increased instead of rising as the retail trades had prophesied.

(2) by the fact that a 10 per cent. reduction on western coal rates, offered in order to stimulate coal movement in the summer months, was followed by a drop in the coal tonnage offering instead of an increase.

In the second place, assuming for the purposes of argument they did have serious effect, Canadian export rates are lower and not higher than the rates in countries with which Canada may be compared. Mile for mile the haul from western Canadian points to the head of navigation is cheaper than in the United States. The export rate on grain is lower than it was last August.

In other words in international competition on her chief items of export, Canada is HELPED by her railway rates. So far as international trade is concerned, they are alleviating unemployment rather than aggravating it!

Inside Canada the same is true. Although it is a very difficult point to prove or disprove, the railways of Canada are sincere in claiming that, by and large, goods are carried more cheaply in Canada than in the United States. Canada had one blanket reduction of 5 per cent. last January, whereas there is still no decrease, nor immediate prospect of a blanket decrease in the United States!

II---The Trend of Freight Rates.

With the exception of war and post-war conditions—the whole tendency of freight rates in this country, as in any other progressive country of its kind, is downward. As Canada's population rises, as our industries multiply and the density of traffic becomes more nearly like that of older countries, some of the principal costs of railway service can be subdivided among a greater number of shippers and travellers, levying on each, therefore, a smaller fraction of these costs than before. For twenty years prior to the war, traffic was on the increase. For twenty years, therefore, the railways have been adjusting rates downward—quite apart from special decreases put in effect by the Board of Railway Commissioners. These revisions have been skillfully applied by experienced, practical economists—that is by the Freight Traffic experts of the railways, whose business it is to know all branches of industry intimately, so that the benefit of these voluntary rate adjustments would go to "key commodities," thus stimulating further growth of the country, increase in traffic, and in the end, further reductions of rates. The difference between giving a reduction to a "key industry" rather than spreading over all kinds of goods is illustrated in the case of a certain small railway which by concentrating rate reductions on lumber enabled the mills of that region to remain open and the people to remain at work, whereas if the effect of the reductions had been scattered over all the goods carried by that road each family would have been able to save a small handful of silver in a year (provided the decreased rates had been passed on as decreased prices by storekeepers—but there would have been almost NO employment.

So much for the day to day reductions arranged on thousands of articles by the Traffic Departments of the roads. In 1907 a substantial reduction in Eastern rates was made. In 1914 a very material cut was applied in the West. So that the transcontinental lines entered the war period with a depressed earning power.

Now while all—even the railways—see the desirability for low freight rates, there are certain limits beyond which no one urges reductions. Of course there are theorists such as Mr. Bernard Shaw, who believed that all railway service should be free. But leaving aside views so far in advance, as yet, of public opinion, it is assumed by most people that a railway will give best service at least cost—because, of course, even free railways must be paid for by the taxpayer—when their managements are allowed to show their mettle by meeting the obligations of their properties out of their earnings. It is usually recognized that these obligations fall into two groups:

Group I—To pay their employees; to pay for current supplies of materials such as coal, etc.; to pay for repairs and replacements.

Group II—To pay such a wage or hire for the use of the capital which built these railways as will make Canadian railway securities always desirable, and easily marketed whether as bonds or stocks. This involves more than the mere payment of the established rate of dividend in the case of privately owned roads. It involves the earning also of some surplus—a safety margin of income over expenditure, which will assure investors of complete safety. This principle of a surplus was definitely established by the judgment of the Board of Railway Commissioners in 1914, under the chairmanship of Sir Henry Drayton—and upheld by its judgment of 1920, when the matter was again considered exhaustively. On this principle rests Canada's ability to enter the money markets wherever she may need and feel confident of bringing back funds for extending her railways as she may require in the future.

War conditions, following the Western and Eastern rate adjustments, brought the railway managements sharply up against these fundamental problems. Comparing the Government's figures for 1907 against 1919—the last year for which the Railway Blue Book is available—the wage bill of the railways rose 306 per cent! Coal 345 per cent! Ties 320 per cent! But neither the volume of traffic nor the scale of freight rates increased in comparable degree during that period! The actual revenue per ton per mile (which is the real proof or disproof of the matter) advanced only 20 per cent. over 1907. The year 1920 enlarged the discrepancy, although an increase of 35 per cent. on Western lines and 40 per cent. in the East was supposed to yield enough additional revenue to meet the increased wages. The increased wages were effective from May 1st—the increased rates not until September 1st. The effectiveness of that increase depended on the VOLUME of traffic remaining at a fairly high level. It did so for a time, then began to drop. To-day it is very low. Nevertheless a 5 per cent. decrease was applied in January. For the first 6 months of 1921 as compared to the first 6 months of 1920 the volume of traffic on the most fortunately situated Canadian road fell 26.72 per cent! And its revenue on this business, in spite of the higher rates, fell 11.14 per cent.!

The net result of these changes has been a state of emergency in the offices of even the most fortunately situated of all Canadian roads. Wages could be paid and bills met on time. Even the usual dividend was paid and a very slight surplus—one of the factors in maintaining the reputation of Canadian railway securities, was earned! But this was only done by deferring work that must ultimately be done on current account. Such economies cannot long be continued without eating too far into the broad safety margin which the Canadian roads maintain! Nothing but slackened speed of trains and reduced Canadian industrial efficiency can result if these savings have to be long continued. Falling traffic still further aggravates the condition. Maintenance cannot continue to be sacrificed to protect the credit of our railway securities! Neither can be neglected!

In May the managements approached the task of reducing their wage bills. For the first time in many years it was the managements and not the men who were taking the initiative. They had been forced to adopt the war-time increases granted in the United States—where 92 per cent. of the membership of the railway unions lie. Therefore when the reverse movement was undertaken in that country the Canadian roads at once gave due notice and a provisional and conditional decrease of roughly 10 per cent.—corresponding to the same movement in the United States—was put in effect, tentatively, as from July 15th. This reduction has not been accepted by the United States membership of the unions, where a vote is being taken on the question—nor by the Canadian membership, who have applied for a Board of Conciliation. Every resource of the managements will be used to sustain this imperatively necessary and only too moderate reduction of their wage bills—which account for 60 per cent. of the cost of operation—they are compelled to regard the matter as still unsettled and therefore not to be considered as a basis for the reduction of railway rates—a view which a majority of the Board of Railway Commissioners has just expressed in its judgment.

III---In Conclusion.

The railway managements welcome deflation of railway rates and are working steadily toward that end. On two grounds, however, they asked that any general decrease be deferred:

FIRST—Because the so-called wage decreases are not yet assured and cannot be until the parallel decreases in the United States, where 92 per cent. of the union membership lies (and where no general freight rate reductions have been ordered), are settled.

SECOND—Because the volume of traffic in the immediate future is problematical and any serious decline, if coupled with a decrease in rates, would have very grave effect on even the most favorably situated managements.

The railways have spoken against blanket decreases on the grounds that it would be in the interests of the country as a whole to concentrate any beneficial effect to be expected, on "key commodities" rather than distribute them over all classes of goods thereby benefitting only the distributors.

They have been actuated throughout by the desire to assist in the process of deflation—objecting only when that process might seem to threaten their solvency and injure them—and through them—the ultimate interests of the Canadian public.

WHO'S A BUM ?

I make good money fixing shoes,
And making boots to measure ;
And oftimes take a nip of booze,
I find it quite a pleasure.

To make the stuff is quite a task,
In fact we wouldn't try ;
Stool pigeons only wish we would,
But we are far to sly.

And if we did we know full well
Our changes would be good,
For any man that holds that job
Is nothing but a dud.

So fathers, take a gentle hint,
Don't let your children shirk
And hang around among such thums,
But get some honest work.

THE STOOL PIGEON

Dear People :—

We often hear the remark, "He's Nothing But a Bum," but we do not take the word in any serious way. Perhaps it is too common, but nevertheless it comprises part of our language, and is destined in our dictionary as a loose, disorderly person. And we could improve on this by adding, "liable to develop into a stool pigeon," which, in our estimation, is the grand finale in respect to honest citizenship. So, far be it from us to train our sons along such drivelling, underland lines.

So, be like us, and mix not with such folks, only when it is entirely necessary, then fool them—Come again.

The feat was made possible by the fact that, due to the extremely hot summer, the Gendarme was for the first time in its known history free from ice and snow.

WARMTH AND COMFORT ALSO PREVAIL

Everything in the way of a Top Coat from the Raglan Sleeve "Hurlingham" with its fang of English and Scotch origin to most fastidious afternoon wraps can now be seen in our Coat Department. The "Hurlingham" for motoring, travelling and stormy weather is fast gaining favor with well dressed women in Canada. The tailoring of these models is superb. In the vast array of coats for general wear wrappy effects prevail, full lines swing from their shoulder seams are belted into shapeliness across the front, the sleeves are tailored as well as wide at the wrists. Picture the warmth and soft becomingness of these coats as developed in Buvelyn, Velour, and Super-Seude Coatings, and collared with Beaverene, Opossum, Sealine ad Coney.

AT $18.95 are Coats made from strong serviceable blanket cloth materials. These coats are belted and have fur collars of Grey Coney which muffle snuggly about the neck. At $21.50 is a similar coat completely lined.

AT $25.00, $27.50, $30.00 each are coats made from Veldynes and Velours in all the season's best colorings. These coats offer much in quality and cut. Even the most discriminating must admire their beauty and recognize their wonderful value.

Shades for Date, Rookie, Sand, Nubian, Ensign, Taupe, Black, are leaders.

$50.00 to $75.00 buys the cream of our coat stock. Each garment possesses some unusual feature that compels it to be an outstanding number from every view point.

The Fall Suit Rich and Elegant in Appearnce

Serviceable and Warm as well

Suits this autumn are in some instances tailored to the degree of severity, as evidenced in the notched collars, snug shoulders and tight-fitting sleeves. If not this, then they follow the straighter lines which invariably features the long graceful coat with a narrow belt at the waist line.

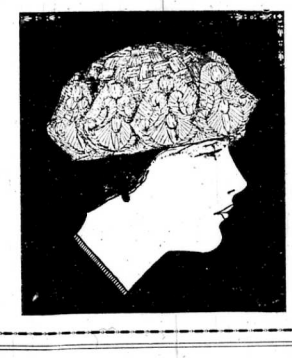
Collars on these suits are usually of fur which muffle snugly about the neck.

Embroidery in some artistic design is usually employed on suits of this nature.

In better suits the linings are of exquisite brocade satins or plain silks.

This season "Brown" is one of the outstanding autumn shades. Navy is equally as popular. Our stock is complete with a beautiful range of suits

Priced from $30.00 up to $75.00



A WAVE OF BLACK IS SWEEPING OVER THE FIELD OF MILLINERY

This is essentially a "Black" season and particularly so when it comes to choosing "Millinery." While other shades are sold, yet when it comes to choosing exclusive hats for fashionable dress-up events invariably you will choose "Black." It is shown in a complete extensive variety of shapes ranging from small cap-fitting tonques to large picture hats, and in all those sizes and shapes known as "medium" as well.

In numerous instances there are hats with just one individual ornamnt used for trimming, and this will be in "Black."

Quite occasionally "steel" (color) is combined with black, and quite frequently black and white is featured.

Veils form a very important part of your head-wear, and are considered to be fashionable.
